

Privacy policy

The Aviation Collectors Association (ACA) stores names, telephone numbers, e-mail addresses of the customers for administrative and commercial purposes. They are exclusively used by ACA and will in no case be provided to third parties. They are stored on secure servers of the ACA or those of a third party. The ACA is committed to maintaining the accuracy, confidentiality and security of the customer's personal data.

- Introduction: The ACA is responsible for monitoring and protecting the personal data under its control.
- Purpose of collecting data: The ACA collects and uses personal information of the customer to provide the customer with the requested products or services and to provide the customer with additional services or other products that the company expects the customer may be interested in. In certain cases, the purposes for which the personal data are requested are evident, such as the provision of name, address and payment details as part of the ordering process, and customer consent with the collection of these data is assumed.
- Consent: Knowledge and consent are required for the storage, use or disclosure of personal data, unless legally required or permitted. The provision of personal information to the ACA is always the customer's choice. However, the customer's decision not to provide certain information may limit the ability of the ACA to deliver products or services to the customer. The ACA does not require permission to obtain or use information as a condition for the delivery of a product or service, except when such permission is required to provide the product or service.
- Storage restriction: The storage of personal data will be limited to the data that are required for purposes such as indicated by the ACA. With the consent of the customer, the ACA can request personal data from the customer via telephone, e-mail or internet.
- Limitation of Use, Disclosure and Retention: Personal Data is only used or provided for the purpose for which it was collected, unless the customer has agreed otherwise, or when required or permitted by law. Personal data will be retained for the time required for the purpose for which they were collected or legally required.
- Accuracy: Extreme care is taken to keep the stored personal data correct, complete and up-to-date for use for which they are intended. The customer him- or herself has the opportunity to enter his or her data, to adjust or to make it illegible. If the customer has made his or her account manifestly unusable, the Company has the right to make it inaccessible or to completely remove it.
- Guaranteeing customer data: Personal data will be protected by appropriate security measures. The ACA shall take all reasonable precautions to prevent unauthorized access to, use or disclosure of personal data.
- Other websites: the Aviation Collectors Association website(s) may offer links to other third party websites that are not covered by this privacy policy. Although the Company strives to link only to websites with high privacy standards, this privacy policy will no longer apply once visitors leave the ACA website(s). In addition, the ACA cannot be held responsible for the privacy practices of third party websites. Visitors are therefore advised to investigate the privacy statements of such sites to find out how they handle personal information.

· Cookies: The websites of the ACA use cookies for the navigation and the progress of the store process. Most browsers are set by default to accept cookies, but customer can reset the browser to refuse all cookies or to indicate when a cookie is being sent. However, some functions and services on the ACA's website(s) may not function properly if cookies are disabled in the customer's browser.

Correspondence: The ACA keeps all incoming and outgoing correspondence by mail or electronic communication on its own secured servers.